

Meet your IT staffing needs with

Quest's Technical Screening Services

Finding the right IT people when you need them can be a difficult and costly challenge in the face of quickly changing technologies and skill shortages. It's important to make certain the technology experts you hire actually possess the necessary qualifications — but this can be difficult unless you have in-depth technical understanding.

Technical screening done right...

- Eases the recruiting process and reduces the amount of time your hiring manager has to spend finding the best candidates
- Helps source candidates who not only match your skill requirements but are also a good fit with your working environment
- Validates the technical skills and certifications of your new hires

Let Quest's Tech Experts Do Your Tech Screening

As a leading-edge provider of Cloud, Managed, and Professional services to clients both small and large, Quest understands today's technology trends and directions — and we maintain relationships with deeply skilled, highly proficient IT experts all over the world.

Benefit from Quest's technical screening experience and expertise!

For us, it's a small step from providing state-of-the-art technology solutions to arranging for the best IT professionals to work on your behalf, either direct-hires or contractors. Our tech staffing professionals take the time to understand the skillsets your business requires and then asks both the general and specific screening questions necessary to match

Directsys.com Succeeds With Quest Tech Screening

"Over the past year, when we've required additional technical expertise or staff augmentation, Quest has always been able to quickly respond to our requests and provide us qualified, available, and local engineers that fit our exact description.

Quest's prescreening process has eliminated candidates whose experience does not match their resumes, preserving valuable time and effort. Our progression from interview to the job site and into productivity is fast, easy, and efficient, as is the billing process.

Altogether, dealing with Quest has been a positive and productive experience. I look forward to doing business with them for years to come!"
